and sometimes crying with her because of you and our desire for you to know Him.” \(Photo 3\)

The main speaker for the event was Leslie Johnson herself. She based her comments on “Who is this God we talk about?” on Numbers 23:19, “God is not human, that he should lie, not a human being, that he should change his mind. Does he speak and then not act? Does he promise and not fulfill?”

Bonn Profiles – Press Reports

Johnson noted that these words of the prophet Balaam, addressed to Balak, came in a context in which Balak observed that God was keeping his promises to Israel. The God we talk about is a promise-keeping God. What were his promises to Israel? Mrs. Johnson took the school community back to Genesis 12 and the promises God made to Abram (later called Abraham). In the story of Abram, she explained, we see that though sin had alienated people from God, from each other, and from the creation itself, God was bringing reconciliation. This included reconciliation with God, with each other, and even with creation. The promise to Abram was not only that he would have numerous descendants and a land, but that the blessing of comprehensive reconciliation would be extended to all peoples on earth. Balaam could see these promises being fulfilled in the people of Israel hundreds of years after God gave the promises to Abram. We can now see that God was fulfilling his promises to Abram in the death of Jesus to pay for our sins and in his resurrection to overcome death. Getting to know God now means getting to know what this comprehensive reconciliation means in our lives: reconciliation with God, with ourselves, with each other, and even with creation. And in a school we have to learn what this comprehensive reconciliation means for math, for science, and for history.

Understanding math, science, and history before God is part of getting to know God truly.

The celebration included a game for the younger children, and a group of teenagers led the assembly in worship music.
